New Home Sales Abruptly Back to Flat Long-Term Trend

New home sales nose-dived in September, dropping by 11.5 percent from the August level. A joint release from the U.S. Census Bureau and the Department of Housing and Urban Development puts the sale of newly constructed single family homes at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 468,000 units in September compared to a revised August rate of 529,000. Analysts' expectations ranged from 535,000 to 560,000.

There was a further jolt in that the August number which originally represented a 5.7 percent increase was a significant downgrade from the original estimate of 552,000 units. September remains 2 percent above the September 2014 rate of 459,000 units. In the longer term, today's drop could be seen as a 'leveling-off' and return to the flat trend that's been intact for most of the past 2.4 years.

September's number was the lowest since last November when the rate of sales was 449,000 units and today's report echoes a similar drop new home sales experienced in the spring when a healthy increase in May was followed by a significant downward revision for May and a further decline in Jun to 469,000 units. Today's report also follows last week's residential construction report in which single family permits and starts barely budged from the previous month.

Inventories rose significantly, from 225,000 units for sale at the end of September compared to 216,000 at the end of August. This increased the supply at the current rate of sales from 4.9 months to 5.8 months

All four of the census regions posted declines, most significantly the Northeast where sales plummeted by 61.8 percent from August and were down 56.7 percent year over year. Sales in the Midwest were down 8.3 percent on both a month-over-month and a year-over-year basis.

The South lost 8.7 percent of sales compared to the previous month but remained 8.3 percent higher than a year earlier. Sales in the West declined by 6.7 percent from the August level but was 8.6 percent higher than in September 2014.

The median price of a new home sold in September was $296,900 and the average price was $364,100. In September 2014 the prices were 261,500 and $319,100 respectively.

Service oriented, responsive, competitive rates and an in depth knowledge of todays mortgage market

After completing my degree in finance at the University of Connecticut, I started in the mortgage business right out of college in 2004. With 15+ years of experience and a primary objective of thoroughly explaining all available loan options to my clients with what is typically the largest investment in their lives, I strive to always make myself available. I constantly educate myself with respect to the mortgage industry and underwriting guidelines for FHA, VA, conventional and jumbo financing. I deliver on the expectations discussed up front and provide the service level my clients deserve from day one. I will remain in touch throughout the process and continue to follow up with you after closing. My goal is to wow you and turn you into clients for life. I want you to be so impressed that throughout and after the process you share my information with your friends, family, neighbors and co-workers who may value from my services.
