Residential Construction Numbers Bounce Back From Dismal March

Permits for residential construction reversed a four-month slide in April and housing starts bounced back from a sharp March decline. The increases in the two key residential construction indicators released today by the U.S. Census Bureau and the Department of Housing and Urban Development will probably quiet some of the concerns over the springs housing momentum that were raised by a poor March report.

Privately-owned housing permits were issued in April at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1,116,000, a 3.6 percent increase from March when permits were down by 7.7 percent. However, that original March permit estimate was further revised down from 1,086,000 to 1,077,000. April permits were running 5.3 percent below permits in April 2015 which were at the rate of 1,178,000 units.

Analysts polled by Econoday had expected permits to come in at a rate of 1.135 million. The number was actually higher than the upper range of predictions which ran from 1.100 to 1.185 million.

The strength in the permitting numbers, however, was not in the single-family sector. Those permits were up 1.5 percent from March to an annual rate of 736,000, 8.4 percent above a year earlier. The March single-family number was revised down from 727,000 to 725,000. Permits for construction of units in buildings with five units or more increased by 9.4 percent to 348,000.

On a non-seasonally adjusted basis, there were permits issued for 98,400 units of housing. In March, the total was 97,700.

Privately-owned housing starts were at a seasonally adjusted rate of 1,172,000, up 6.6 percent from March when they had tumbled by 8.8 percent. The original 1,089,000 March estimate of starts recovered somewhat, revised today to 1,099,000. Despite April's strong showing housing starts are still 1.7 percent below the 1,192,000 units posted in April 2015.

The housing starts number was also significantly higher than analysts had predicted, well above the upper range of 1.180 million. The census was 1.130 million.

Service oriented, responsive, competitive rates and an in depth knowledge of todays mortgage market

After completing my degree in finance at the University of Connecticut, I started in the mortgage business right out of college in 2004. With 15+ years of experience and a primary objective of thoroughly explaining all available loan options to my clients with what is typically the largest investment in their lives, I strive to always make myself available. I constantly educate myself with respect to the mortgage industry and underwriting guidelines for FHA, VA, conventional and jumbo financing. I deliver on the expectations discussed up front and provide the service level my clients deserve from day one. I will remain in touch throughout the process and continue to follow up with you after closing. My goal is to wow you and turn you into clients for life. I want you to be so impressed that throughout and after the process you share my information with your friends, family, neighbors and co-workers who may value from my services.
