Last Week's Low Rates Drove Ongoing Refi Surge

Applications for refinancing again drove a significant increase in mortgage applications during the week ended February 12 as mortgage rates continued to decline. The Mortgage Bankers Association (MBA) said its Market Composite Index, a measure of mortgage application volume, rose 8.2 percent compared to the week ended February 5 on a seasonally adjusted basis and was up 10 percent on an unadjusted basis.

Refinancing accounted for 64.3 percent of the applications submitted during the week, up from 61.2 percent a week earlier and the highest share since February of last year. The volume of those refinancing applications rose 16 percent from a week earlier and the index for conventional refinance applications was up by the same amount week-over-week and reached the highest level since January 2015.

Despite some of the lowest interest rates in a year the enthusiasm for mortgages did not carry over to the purchase side. The seasonally adjusted Purchase Index was down 4 percent from the previous week although it increased by 2 percent on an unadjusted basis and remained 30 percent higher than during the same week in 2015.

The refinance share of mortgage activity increased to its highest level since February 2015, 64.3 percent of total applications, from 61.2 percent the previous week.
